

Provo, Utah. June 6, 1912.

Representatives of the canal companies and individual water users taking water from Provo river both here and in Wasatch County have held a series of meetings lately to determine a method of distributing the high water when the flow is changing from the extreme high period to the low period or decreed waters.

The following resolutions were adopted and it is thought that amicable arrangements will be entered into. A more systematic division of the waters will undoubtedly work to the advantage of all.

"Be it the sense of this meeting that the waters of Provo river during the period when the river begins to fall, between high water and decreed rights, be distributed among the various users from the Midway dam in Wasatch County to Utah Lake in Utah County on a basis of one second foot of water for fifty-five acres of land; and that we use our influence with the various companies and individual users to adopt this arrangement for this present season of 1912.

Be it the sense of this meeting that we use our influence with our Companies to have the County Commissioners of Summit, Wasatch and Utah Counties, appoint a water commissioner for ~~the~~ respective Counties, (where one is not already appointed) and ask the District Court to confirm each commissioner so appointed, as Court Commissioner; the said three commissioners to regulate and distribute the water during the season of 1912, according to the foregoing resolution.
